

The Umbrella That Chased Rain

Every morning, Riya carried the same old blue umbrella to school. The strange thing was, it never opened when it rained. Instead, it opened only on sunny days.

One afternoon, dark clouds gathered, and everyone rushed for cover. Riya pressed the button, but the umbrella stayed shut. "Not again!" she sighed.

Just then, the umbrella slipped from her hands and rolled down the street. To Riya's surprise, it wasn't running away—it was chasing the rain. It stopped beneath a tiny puppy shivering beside a bench. The umbrella popped open, keeping the puppy warm and dry.

Riya smiled and carried the puppy home. The rain stopped, and the umbrella quietly folded itself.

The next morning, the umbrella led Riya to an elderly gardener struggling to water wilted flowers. As soon as Riya helped, the flowers seemed brighter, and the umbrella twirled happily.

Day after day, it guided her to someone who needed a little kindness—a lost child, a lonely neighbor, even a bird with an injured wing.

Soon, Riya realized the umbrella had never been afraid of rain. It simply knew that every storm hides someone waiting for help.

From then on, whenever the clouds gathered, Riya didn't worry about getting wet. She looked forward to discovering who needed a little sunshine instead.

